When you choose nonsubscription searching of a database, RLG charges you by the number of searches done. You are not charged for displaying, printing, or editing records. Only exporting copies of MARC records may incur an extra charge; see "Transferring MARC Records" on page 13. Network connection is separately charged; see page 18.

Briefly, a search is a command that retrieves records or a "zero result." You are not charged for using logical operators (AND, OR, and NOT) or for modifying a search with qualifiers (ALSO, LIMIT). For more detail on what constitutes a chargeable search through RLG's Eureka®, RLIN®, or Z39.50 server, see www.rlg.org/whatsrch.html. Some searches through RLIN are deeply discounted; see www.rlg.org/rlinsave.html.

Search Block Prices

A search block is a number of searches purchased for the year that costs you less per unit than when you pay for one search at a time. (Search blocks offer good value when you are doing reference searching, transferring MARC records
